SOURCE :

1. At 12:30 p.m. on 16 January 1954, twelve Soviet PT boats and six type-301 guard vessels were moored at the various berths in Swinemunde harbor. On 27 January 1954, ten vessels of similar types, including not less than nine PT boats, tender G 482 and transport IRKUT 728 were moored there. 1
2. Prior to the war, a mine depot with underground store rooms was located in the Mellin area. A quay installation was still available on the Mellin passage. Mine barges were previously unloaded there. On 27 January 1954, two operational cranes were available and three railroad tracks ran landward from the quay. The tracks looked bright and were obviously in use. The entire area, which formerly was densely wooded, was covered with debris and ruins. Source believed that the debris was left untouched for camouflage reasons. Some smokestacks, which stood direct on the ground, emitted smoke. Oblong half-sunk oil tanks were located near the quay installation.
3. Eight gun emplacements under camouflage nets were at the harbor entrance on the west side of the Swine River. An observation tower, about 10 meters high, was in the battery area on a sandy hill on the outskirts of the woods. A radar set looking like an open umbrella pointing downward was in the battery emplacement. Its net ring was about 2 meters in diameter.

25X1A 1. ☐ Comment. These vessels were previously reported.
